

Brad Fulkerson

Brad Fulkerson is an Education Ombudsman with the Office of the Education Ombudsman. He is a proud product of and strong advocate for public schools, and has experience teaching, tutoring, and coaching in K-12 schools in Washington, Arizona, and India.

Mr. Fulkerson received his bachelor's degree in English and Comparative Religion from the University of Washington and holds a Master of Education degree from Arizona State University. He is a former middle school Language Arts teacher and remains a certified substitute teacher in Washington. In his time working in schools he has served as a grade level lead, represented certified staff on an advisory group to the Superintendent, worked on a district-wide curriculum audit, and led multiple professional development classes on data collection and analysis. He has also worked as a Research Analyst at the University of Washington's Center on Reinventing Public Education and, prior to stepping into his current role, was a Public Policy and Research intern at OEO.

As a Washington native, Mr. Fulkerson enjoys the diversity of clients and cases from all across the state he works with each day. In addition to his Ombudsman casework he also helps maintain and run reports on OEO's database, sits on the Washington State School Bullying Work Group and the Community Center for Education Results' Road Map ELL Data Work Group, and is the OEO/OSPI staff lead for the Washington State School Bullying Data Subgroup.
